

Guy's Postal Directory of Munster 1886

The new street between the two rivers, created by the Earl of Egmont in 1830-'32, was given the name Egmont Place. It was designed with a square at either end, to be fronted with a riverside plantation. In time, it would appear that the name became interchangeable with Egmont Row and this caused some confusion when both were used simultaneously, as they are in this particular survey. (In one instance is found a third: Egmont Street.) Egmont Row seems to have been adopted by those living in today's O'Brien Street, a name created in 1887 at the direction of the local branch of the National League, which order did not receive immediate universal acceptance. This resulted in the area being richly endowed with three different names at the taking of the 1901 census.
